

A GAME DINNER.

We heard an amusing story the other day of a novel feast that we do not recollect ever to have seen in print. It is too good to be lost, and although it may be certainly lost in our telling, we may succeed in giving the point.

Shortly after the war of Great Britain an aristocratic English gentleman built a fine residence in the vicinity of Fort George, on the Niagara Frontier, and, in accordance with the old country idea of exclusiveness, he enclosed his ground with a high wall.

One day this chap took the small boat that lay moored at the foot of the walls of the fort and crossed over to the Canadian shore for a hunt. He wandered over several miles in the rear of Fort George without meeting any game, and on his return seeing a crow in a tree within the enclosure of the aristocratic Englishman, he seized the high fence, fired and brought down his game. Colonel, or whatever his title might have been—we will call him Colonel, anyhow—witnessed the transaction, and advanced while the soldier was reloading. He was very angry, but seeing the Yankee standing coolly with a loaded gun in his hand, he gulped down his passion for the moment, and merely asked him if he had killed the crow. The soldier replied he did. "I am sorry," said the Colonel, "for he was a pet. By the by, that is a very pretty gun—will you be so kind as to let me look at it?"

The soldier complied with the request. The Englishman took the gun, stepped back a few paces, took deliberate aim, and then broke forth in a tirade of abuse, concluding with an order to stop down and take a bite of the crow or he would blow his brains out. The soldier explained, apologized and entreated. It was no use.

There was a shot in the Englishman's eye—there was no help for it—and the soldier stepped down and took a bite of the crow, but he did not stop. Up came his breakfast—his dinner before, and it really appeared as if he would throw up his tea. The Englishman glared on the misery of his victim, and smiled complacently at every additional heave. When he got through vomiting and had wiped his eyes, the Colonel handed him his gun, with the remark, "Now, you rascal, that will teach you how to poach on a gentleman's enclosure."

The Yankee took his gun, and the Colonel might have seen the devil in his eye if he had looked close. Stepping back he took deliberate aim at the heart of his host, and ordered him instantly to finish the crow. Angry expostulations, prayers and entreaties were useless things. There was a shot in the American eye before—There was no help at hand and he took a bite at the crow. One bite was enough to send all the good dinners he had eaten lately on the same journey with the garri-son fare of the soldier, and while the Englishman was in an agony of sickness, Jonathan escaped to the other shore.

The next morning early, the Commandant of Fort Niagara was sitting in his quarters, when Col. — was announced. "Sir," said Col. —, "I come to demand the punishment of one of your men who yesterday entered my premises and committed a great outrage."

"We have 400 men here and it would be difficult for me to know who it is you mean," said the American officer. The Englishman described him as a long, dandling, stuttering, stooped-shouldered devil.

"Ah! I know who you mean," said the officer; "he is always getting into mischief. Orderly, call Tom."

In a few moments Tom entered and stood at attention as straight as his natural build would allow, while not a trace of emotion was visible in his countenance. "Tom," said his officer, "do you know this gentleman?"

"Where did you ever see him before?" "I-I," said Tom, stuttering awfully, but retaining the grave expression natural to his face; "I di-di-di-dined with him yesterday."

We believe Tom was not punished.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

—The present Queen of England does not appear to disapprove of rigid courtly ceremonies. When on a visit to the royal family of France at Pau, the Queen of Belgium had been told that her Majesty of England took every morning at ten o'clock a glass of cold water. Accordingly, on the day after her arrival, a servant duly made his appearance at the appointed hour, bearing on a silver salver a carafe and two glasses, which he tendered to the sovereign who declined the refreshment with a wave of the hand. The Belgian Queen seeing this, whispered to her son, who was present, to pour out a glass of water and offer it to the Queen; this being done, it was graciously accepted, the fact being that etiquette would not allow her Majesty to pour out the water for herself when a servant was present. The Queen may not speak to a tradesman; and Victoria has been seen standing not a yard away from one, addressing all her inquiries to an equerry, who repeated them to the tradesman, and again repeated to her Majesty all the answers.
